Research Facilities

Queen St, Berry

The collection in the Berry Museum comprises items and memorabilia donated by the local community, collated and indexed by volunteers. All relate to the area's agricultural and dairying past and to Berry's origins as an estate town of the Coolangatta Estate.

There is an extensive collection of early twentieth century photographs (some original) taken locally; and records relating to local families are maintained; together with Microfilms of the "Berry Estate Papers" from the Mitchell Library Collection (1817-1939), the South Coast Register and Broughton Creek Register etc.

The Museum has a complete database of over 80,000 names linked to families in the Berry and surrounding districts, on a computer database.
